

THE TREE-GOD AND THE MAN

Once upon a time, there was a tribble man in a dense forest

I am tired of staying below the trees

If I get wood, then I can built a house to stay

There were many trees in the jungle like sandalwood, mango, jamun, teak, innumerable trees and innumerable fruits

One day the man stood before all the trees

The man said to all trees....

With much hard work i have made one axe

A cartoon illustration of a man in a forest. The man is shirtless, has dark hair, and is wearing purple shorts. He is holding a rolled-up scroll in his left hand and a large, curved blade in his right hand. He has a friendly expression. To his left is a tree with a human-like face, including eyes, eyebrows, and a mouth. A speech bubble above the man contains the text: "To hold it, i want some two feet long wood log, can you be merciful to me?". The background consists of green foliage and trees.

To hold it, i want some two feet long wood log, can you be merciful to me?

Yes you can take a two feet long branch from me

The man joined the log to the axe. Then he caught hold of the axe's end and whirled it in force in the air. All the trees began to observe with wonder

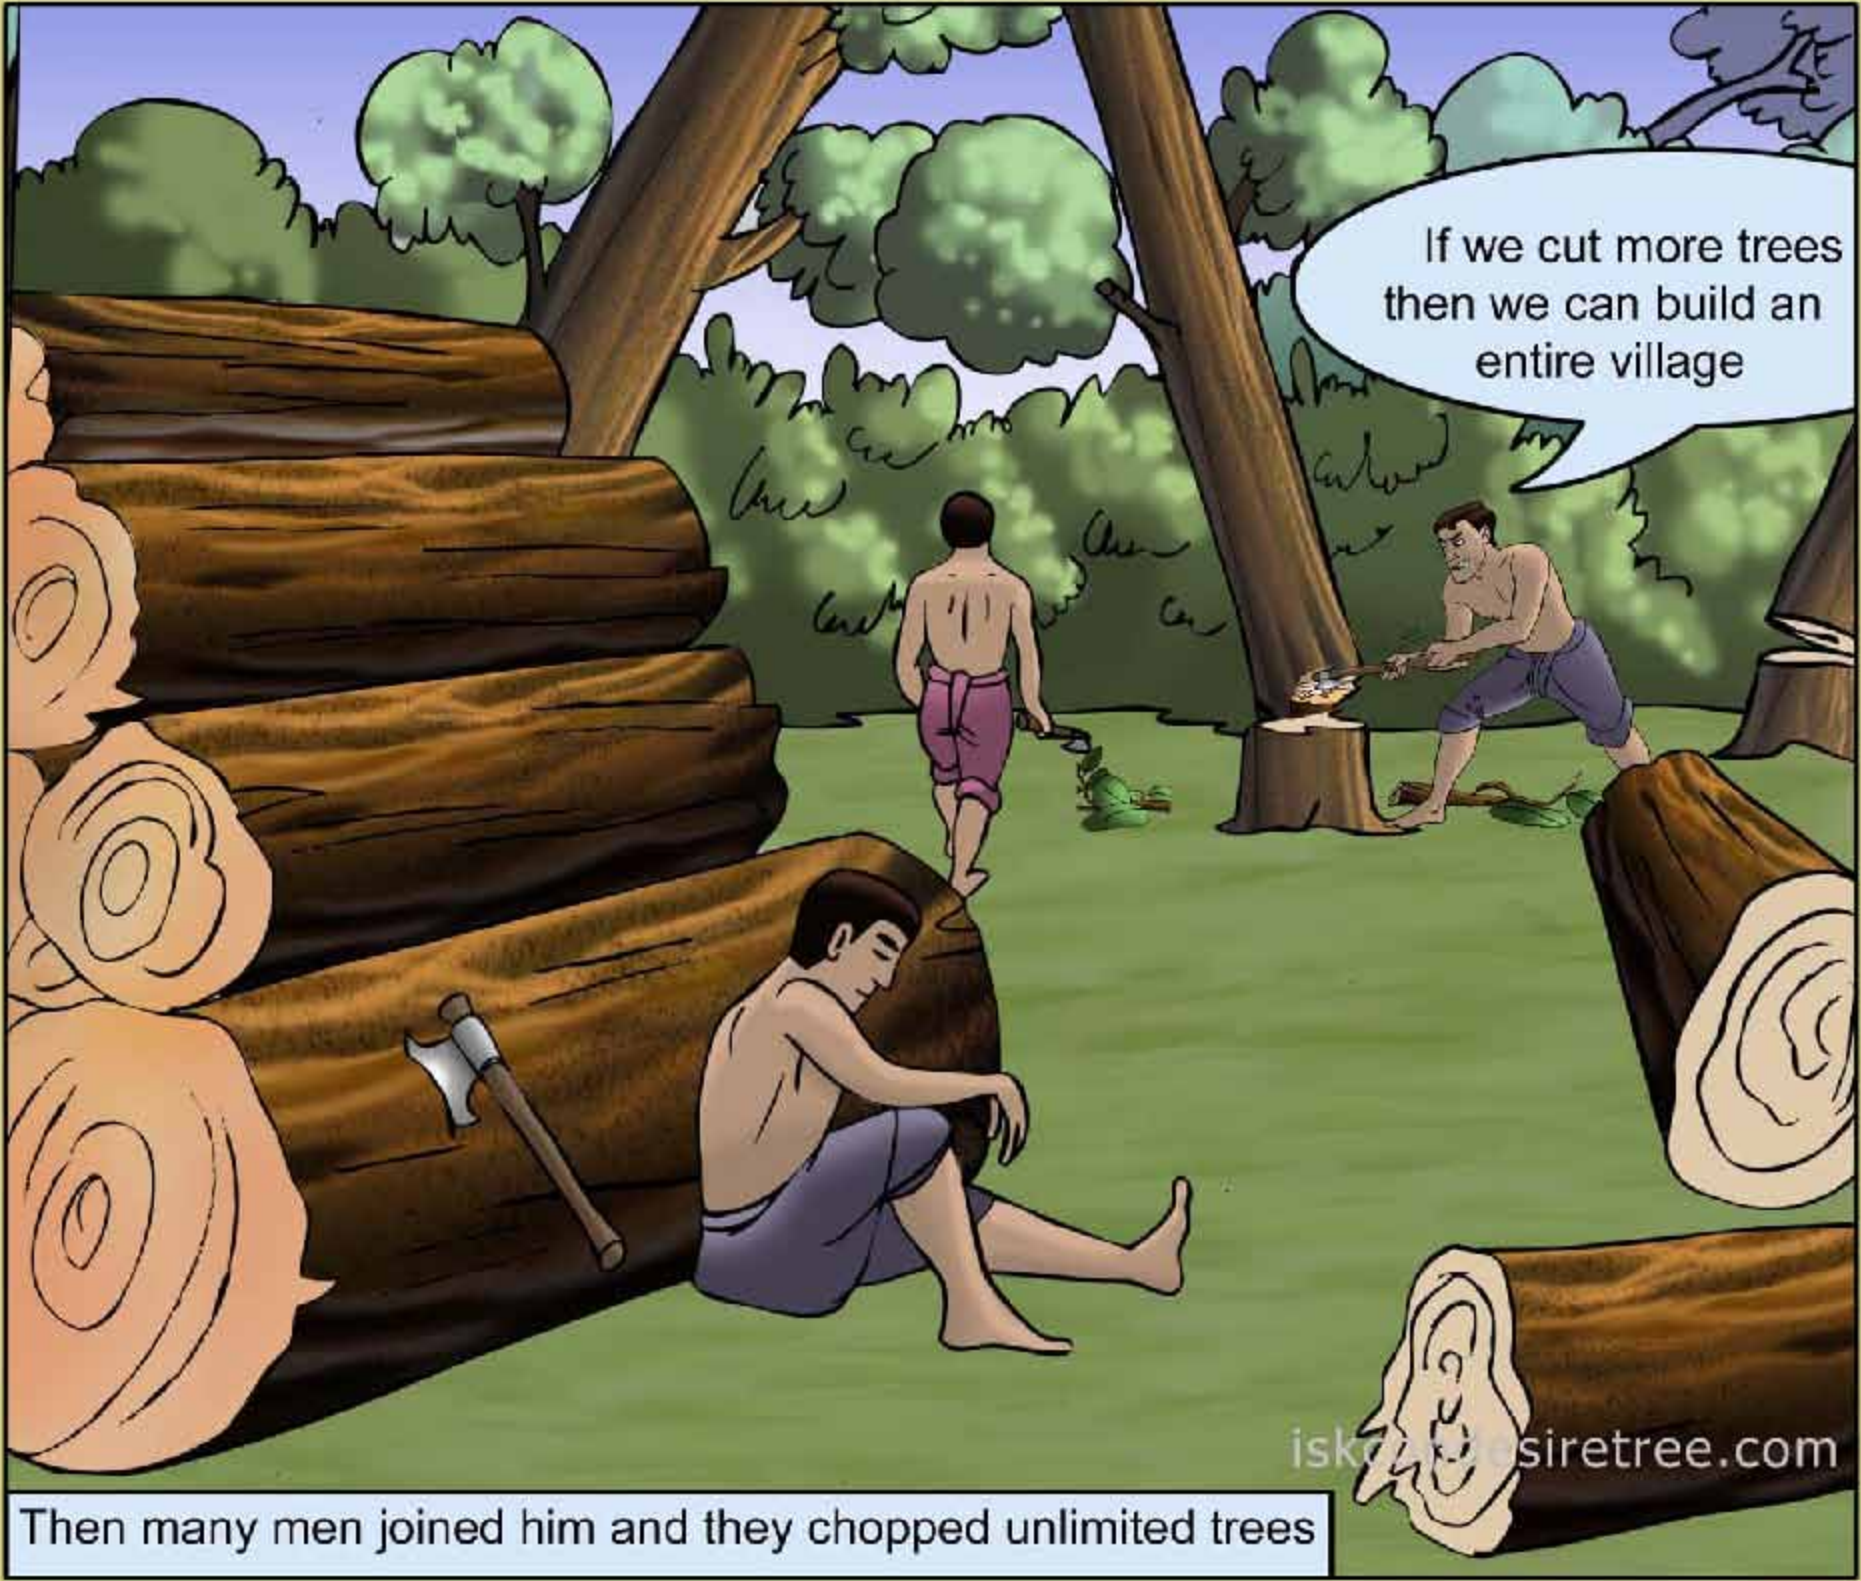

But the man began to chop many branches in great force. The tree screamed in pain

If I cut more trees, then I can built a bigger house

At the end, the man attacked even the trunk. Making the final scream, the tree collapsed

If we cut more trees then we can build an entire village

Then many men joined him and they chopped unlimited trees

In this way the jungle was being cleared off. As a result, the rainfall reduced. At last man had to suffer shortage of even drinking water

Then one intelligent man said....

We should plant more and more trees and worship the trees. Then we shall have enough water
