

The Churning Of The Ocean Of Milk

Two teams are formed. One team represents the demigods, the other team represents the demons. A long, strong rope is the serpent Vasuki. A line is drawn at an equal distance between the two teams.

Both teams pull on the rope in opposite directions with as much strength as possible. They are churning the ocean of milk. The team that succeeds in dragging the first person of the other team over the line wins. While pulling, both teams chant Hare Krishna very loudly.
